

Sumita B. Khatri, M.D. M.Sc.

Co-Director of the Asthma Center for the Cleveland Clinic

Sumita B. Khatri, M.D. M.Sc. is an adult pulmonary and critical care physician with a specialized focus in asthma. She earned her medical degree at Ohio State University and trained in Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine at Cleveland Clinic.

After training, she joined the faculty at Emory University Medical Center where she received her Master in Clinical Research. She returned to Cleveland in 2006, worked at the county hospital and has been back at Cleveland Clinic as a Co-Director of the Asthma Center for the past year. Dr. Khatri is also Co-Chair of the Asthma/COPD Assembly of the Healthy Homes Advisory Council in Cuyahoga County.

Dr. Khatri's clinical and research interests include the effects of air pollution and environmental triggers on asthma, evaluating biomarkers of asthma, and community engagement with respect to asthma and lung health. In this regard, she has been involved with the NIH-sponsored Severe Asthma Research Program, collaborative research with the USEPA, and medical industry-associated asthma therapy trials
