

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The World Resources Institute acknowledges the encouragement and financial support provided by the United States Agency for International Development, the David and Lucile Packard Foundation, the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency, and the United Nations Foundation. WRI's Reefs at Risk project is a component of the International Coral Reef Action Network (ICRAN), a collaborative effort designed to reverse the decline of the world's coral reefs. ICRAN consists of a set of interlinked, complementary activities that will facilitate the proliferation of good practices for coral reef management and conservation.

The Reefs at Risk analysis would not have been possible without the data and expert advice provided by our partner institutions, as well as by the many experts who generously reviewed and provided input on this report.
